The subject matters of claims 1-34 appear to involve an inventive step in view of the documents cited in the ISR. Documents 1-6 do not describe a DC converter, comprising (1) a first series circuit connected in parallel with a DC power supply, in which the primary winding of a transformer and a first switch are connected in series with each other, (2) a saturable reactor connected in parallel with the primary winding of the transformer, (3) a first return circuit connected with the first series circuit, for returning the energy accumulated in the saturable reactor, in which a second switch and a snubber capacitor are connected in series with each other, and (4) a control circuit for turning on and off the first switch and the second switch alternately. This constitution is not considered to be obvious to a person skilled in the art either.
